Preface

This Louisiana Department of Education's One Hundred Thirtieth Annual Report was developed upon the principle that the Report should be timely, relevant and useful. Thanks to the excellent cooperation of the parish/city school systems and various personnel in the Department of Education, the Report production process has resulted in more timeliness relative to past reports. The degree of relevance and usefulness will be determined by users of the Report in time, of course.

The issues and problems with which we must grapple in developing a better future for ourselves, our children, and their children are very difficult. The interrelationships among educational, social, economic, political, and ecological systems are becoming more and more apparent. None operates in isolation from another. The implacable working of "Murphy's Fundamental Laws" seems to stand in the way of the future:

1. If anything can go wrong it will -- and at the worst possible time.
2. Nothing is ever as simple as it seems.
3. Everything always costs more money than you have.
4. If you fool with a thing long enough, it will break.
5. If you try to please everybody, somebody won't like it.
6. It is a natural law that nothing ever quite works out right.
7. It is easier to get into a thing than to get out of it.
8. If you explain something so clearly that no one can misunderstand, someone will.
9. Whatever you want to do, you have to do something else first.

One fact that complicates educational planning other than Murphy's Laws and other phenomena is that our children will be living in a world that will be quite different from any that has existed ever before. For example, the ten-year-old in today's classroom will likely spend forty or more years in the twenty-first century.

Inventing a desirable new future will involve sophisticated organizations, huge expenditures of resources, and a lot of good luck. It is imperative, to begin with, that all of us have the "big picture." The Report was developed to present such, as is evident from the Report outline:

"State Summary"

Subsection IV - "Forecasting Louisiana Education in the 1980s"

"Parish/City Educational Profiles"

The "Parish/City Educational Profiles" include selected statistics for each of the sixty-six systems. Researchers and others who need more detailed data can obtain copies of input forms from the Bureau of Research upon request.

As 1980 Census data becomes available, it is anticipated that future profiles will include socio-economic data that research indicates to be related to educational achievement. District and state education data aggregates can be useful to decision makers, but it appears that this kind of macro approach has limited usefulness.

It appears from research that the most meaningful approach is the micro type. In other words, the school should become the center of inquiry. District personnel are encouraged to investigate the similarities and differences on a school-by-school approach as related to educational achievement.

Converting schools from being disseminators of information and/or knowledge to centers of inquiry, whereby staff, students, and parents become active problem solvers pertaining to overall school and learning problems, could lead to dramatic changes in academic performance. Many educational problems are not functions of teacher deficits but rather of the lack of an organizational climate that "turns people on." The affective domain is a vital one along with the cognitive domain and probably is ignored in some instances where focus is entirely upon competency based education.

Focus in the Report will be upon variables that appear to be significant relevant to school efficiency and effectiveness. The ultimate purpose is to provide a data base upon which interested persons can determine appropriate questions and answers to establish a dialogue relative to means of effecting educational change.

There appear to be four prime change strategies -- court mandates, legislative mandates, moral persuasion, and research/development. The mandates clearly have been effective. Moral persuasion and research/development have been relatively less effective. One reason for the lack of impact of research/development is the minor investment in such in the field of education. Traditionally, less than one-half of one percent of local district educational budgets has been dedicated to research/development. The investment needs to be increased dramatically at the local level. In addition, it seems reasonable that an additional investment of $3 million at the State Department of Education level for research can be justified in light of a $1 billion elementary-secondary educational program statewide. Promotion of research attitudes and the questioning of why ineffective educational practices persist could lead to dramatic change.

The Bureau of Research invites user feedback about the Report. Any suggestions to improve the quality for the future will be appreciated immensely.

STATE SUMMARY

I. Trends in Louisiana Public Education in the 1970s

A. Trends in Student Enrollment (1970-79)

A principal indicator of the future of education in any state is its population growth, since people constitute the consumers of education. According to estimates from the Bureau of the Census,[1] Louisiana experienced an 8.9% increase in population from 1970-78 compared to the national increase of 7.5% for the same period. The provisional estimate of the state's population as of July 1, 1977 was 3,930,000; the estimate for July 1, 1978 had increased to 3,966,000.[2] Two factors contributed to Louisiana's increasing population in the 1970s: (a) the continuation of a traditionally high birth rate compared to the national rate; and (b) the fact that Louisiana had a positive net migration pattern in the 1970s for the first time since 1940.

The trend in the number of educables in the state from 1970-80 is presented in Table 1. An educable is defined as any child aged six to eighteen either attending or not attending school. The absolute number of educables in Louisiana peaked in 1971 and has slowly decreased since that time. This decrease is due to the lower birth rate of the 1960s and early 1970s, a national trend which Louisiana followed. Increases in the birth rate in the late 1970s will lead to an increase in the number of educables in the 1980s. This point will be elaborated upon in Sections II and IV.

Trends in student registration are presented in Table 2. These figures include students in kindergarten and special education. If these students were removed from the population, there would be a small decline in enrollment each year from 1970-71 to 1978-79. The percentage of students in nonpublic schools has been consistent across the years, ranging from 15.21% to 15.99% of the total. Eighty-eight percent of the students in nonpublic schools in 1970-71 were white, while 85% in 1978-79 were white. This is in marked contrast to public schools, which were 60% white in both 1970-71 and 1978-79.

Trends in average daily membership and average daily attendance are presented in Table 3. The range for average daily attendance as a percent of average daily membership is small: the lowest percent was 91.59 and the highest was 92.39. Comparison of this percentage with national figures will be made in Section II. Over the nine-year period from 1970-79, average daily membership fell 4.2% and average daily attendance decreased 4.8%.

Trends in Louisiana school dropouts are presented in Table 4. The percent of dropouts who are black is larger than the percent of school enrollment who are black, but the excess percentage dropped from 14.2% in 1970-71 to 7.1% in 1978-79. The percent of the enrollment who drop out was relatively consistent across the years, ranging from a low of 1.65% in 1975-76 to a high of 1.93% in 1973-74.

More detailed information on dropouts from 1978-79 is found in Tables 5 and 6. A larger percent of whites than blacks drop out between the ages of 15 and 17, while a larger percent of blacks than whites drop out below the age of 15 and above the age of 17. A slightly higher percentage of black dropouts (40.8%) leave school before the tenth grade than do white dropouts (37.0%). A considerably higher percentage of the parents of black dropouts (72.3%) do not have a high school education compared to the parents of white dropouts (53.0%).

White dropouts were slightly more active in extracurricular activities than blacks, but neither group was very active. The reasons that schools gave for the students' dropping out was similar for both races, with educational problems and personality and adjustment problems accounting for over 62% of the dropouts. As might be expected, a considerably higher percentage of females (11.8%) than males (2.3%) dropped out to marry. There were considerable racial differences in this percentage: 15.1% of the white female dropouts leave school to marry, compared to only 7.3% of the black female dropouts.

While student registration showed a steady decline from school year 1970-71 through school year 1978-79, the absolute number of high school graduates per year increased 6.4% over that period of time. Nonpublic graduates increased 11.9% from 1970-71 to 1978-79, while public graduates increased 5.4%. Public school graduates constituted a steady 84%-85% of the total number of graduates over this period of time. Black students constituted 29.2% of the total graduates in 1970-71 and 30.8% of the total graduates in 1978-79. See Table 7 for more details about the number of high school graduates in Louisiana during the 1970s. Also, see Section III for information on the number of students receiving general equivalency degrees in 1978 and 1979.

Student registration during the 1970s in regular and special education categories is presented in Table 8. As noted above, there is a decrease in student registration each year during the 1970s when the students in special education are removed from the population. The overall decrease of 8.2% in regular elementary and secondary education was composed of two opposite trends during the period: elementary enrollment dropped nearly 14%, while secondary enrollment increased 7%. See Table 47 for complete information on registration per grade level in 1978-79.

The drop in elementary enrollment was a function of the decrease in birth rates during the 1960s and early 1970s, while the increase in secondary enrollment reflected the higher birth rates of the late 1950s and early 1960s. It should be noted that enrollment in secondary education peaked in school year 1976-77 and should show the steady decline in the 1980s that elementary schools showed in the 1970s. Conversely, elementary enrollment figures should begin increasing in the 1980s as a function of the increased birth rates of the late 1970s.

There was a large increase in kindergarten and special education enrollment during the 1970s. Kindergarten enrollment expanded by 83% from school year 1970-71 through school year 1976-77, but declined slightly in school years 1977-78 and 1978-79. Kindergarten enrollment appears to have stabilized around the 65,000 mark, which is approximately 6.5% of the overall student population.

Enrollment in special education classes, both elementary and secondary, increased dramatically over the past decade. The increase in elementary special enrollment was 89% during this period, while secondary special enrollment increased over 300%. Students in special education comprised 3% of the total student population in 1978-79, compared to only 1.4% of the total in 1970-71.

B. Trends in Staff and Structure of Schools (1970-79)

There was an overall increase in both the professional and nonprofessional staffs of the public and nonpublic schools in the 1970s, as indicated in Tables 9 and 10. The professional staff increased by 12.6% in the public and 10.9% in the nonpublic school systems during this period, while the nonprofessional staffs increased by 31.6% and 47.9% respectively during the same period.

There was a consistent difference in the percent of professionals out of the total staff employed by the public and nonpublic systems: the nonpublic system employed about 15% more professional staff than the public (system) during the 1970s. This difference may be partially attributable to different methods for calculating professional staff members, since nonpublic reporting of professional staff counted each parttime employee as a full staff member. The percent of the public school staff who were professional dropped from 62.3% to 58.6% during this period, while it dropped from 78.9% to 73.7% for nonpublic schools.

The black-white ratio of professional staff members mirrors the student composition of the public and nonpublic schools, as can be seen in Tables 10 and 11. Ninety-one and three/tenths percent of the professional staff of the nonpublic schools were white in 1978-79 compared to 65% of the classroom teachers and 71.6% of the principals who were white in the public schools in that year. For both the public and nonpublic schools, the professional staffs are composed of approximately 6% more whites than the student body.

From school year 1970-71 to school year 1978-79 there were changes in the sex and race ratios of principals and classroom teachers in the public school system, as indicated in Table 11. The 2.95% percent decline in percent of white male principals over the decade was offset by a 2.81% percent increase in percent of black male principals. The percentage of female principals (16%) stayed the same throughout the 1970s.

At the beginning of the decade, 74.9% of the classroom teachers were females. This figure had increased to 77.1% by school year 1978-79. Thus, the inverse relationship between percentage of male principals and percentage of male classroom teachers continued unabated during the 1970s. The black-white ratio of classroom teachers stayed approximately the same during the decade.

The student-teacher ratios for public and nonpublic schools over the past decade are presented in Table 12. The number of students declined during the 1970s, while the number of classroom instructors increased. Thus, the student-teacher ratio declined by 13.95% in the public school system and 16.59% in the nonpublic schools during this period. The decrease in student-teacher ratios occurred primarily in the elementary schools, while the secondary student-teacher ratio stayed about the same over that period. The largest decrease in student-teacher ratio occurred in special education, where a large increase in students was offset by an even larger increase in instructors.

The professional training of the public school instructional staff changed considerably during the 1970s, as indicated in Table 13. The number of teachers and principals with less than a college education decreased from 3.8% of the total to only .49%, while the number with a bachelor's degree decreased from 68.76% to 57.29%. Conversely, the number with more than four years of college increased dramatically from 27.44% of the total in 1970-71 to 42.22% in 1978-79.

Parallel to this increase in training was an increase in the experience of principals and teachers during the 1970s, as seen in Table 14. The number of teachers with less than five years of experience decreased from 30.5% of the total in 1970-71 to 23.2% in 1978-79. On the other hand, the number of teachers with five to nine years of experience increased from 20.9% of the total to 24.9%, and the number of teachers with ten to fourteen years' experience increased from 15.8% to 19.0%.

While the number of teachers and principals with fifteen years or more of experience stayed about the same (32.8% to 32.9% over the nine-year period), the distribution by race of those personnel changed considerably. In 1970-71, the percent of black teachers and principals with that much experience (35.5%) was slightly higher than that for whites (32.9%). In 1978-79, the percent of blacks with fifteen years or more experience had increased to 41.9%, while the white percentage had decreased to 28.1%. While both races decreased in the percent of instructional personnel with less than five years of experience, the percent of whites increased most notably in the five to fourteen years category and the percent of blacks increased the most in the fifteen years and more category .

The annual salaries of principals and teachers in the public school system increased each year during the 1970s. This trend is presented in Table 15. The increase for teachers was 54.88% during this period, compared to a 41.84% increase for principals. Salaries for black teachers were slightly higher over the decade than those for white teachers. This is probably a function of the longer average experience of black teachers in the public school system.

The total number of public and nonpublic schools increased by 3.5% during the 1970s. Thus, while the total number of students decreased, the number of schools increased. There was a net increase of 65 schools, consisting of an increase of 75 schools in the public school system and a decrease of 10 schools in the nonpublic system. See Table 16 for more details.

As indicated in Table 17, there was a net increase in the number of buildings and a net decrease in the number of sites of public school property during the 1970s. Overall, the total cost of buildings, sites and equipment increased 56.8% during the 1970s, with the largest increases occurring during the inflationary 1976-79 period.

The number of libraries, librarians, and books all increased during the 1970s, as noted in Table 18. There was a 66% annual increase in the current payments for salaries, books and supplies over the 1970s, compared to a 30% increase in the number of books in libraries during that period.

The school transportation program also expanded during the 1970s, despite the decrease in the total number of students. There was a 7% increase in the percent of the total pupil registration who were bussed (57.2% to 64.2%) to the public schools, compared to a 1.7% increase (26.5% to 28.2%) in the nonpublic school system. The number of miles traveled one-way per day peaked in 1977-78 at 184,623.1. Over the decade there was a 25% increase in the number of miles traveled per day by school busses.

C. Trends in Education Finance (1970-79)

The trend in revenue from local, state and federal sources for education for the 1974-79 period is presented in Table 20. Only the last five years were included in this trend analysis, since a new accounting system was initiated in 1974 and financial data from the earlier years of the decade are not comparable to data from this new system.

Total revenue increased by 30.35% over this five-year period from $947,970,612 in 1974-75 to $1,361,124,301 in 1978-79. The percent of total revenue from state sources decreased 3.6% over this period, while the percent of the total from federal sources increased 2.21% and that from local sources increased 1.39%. As indicated in Table 21, the revenue from ESEA Title I funds increased by 97% from 1970-71 through 1978-79. In 1978-79, ESEA Title I funds accounted for 5.09% of the total revenue for education.

The minimum foundation program for Louisiana during the 1970s is presented in Table 22. The overall cost of the program increased by 90.51% over this ten-year period, while local support for the program decreased 10.45%. Thus, the percent of local support for the total cost of the program decreased from 10.46% in 1970-71 to 4.92% in 1979-80.

The expenditure of all state revenues (including federal grants) and of state revenues (excluding federal grants) for all government functions are found in Tables 23 and 24. These figures were taken from the Executive Budgets of the State of Louisiana during the 1970s. The percent of all state and federal revenues going to education ranged from a low of 32.61% in 1975-76 to a high of 36.95% in 1972-73. The percent of state revenues going into education ranged from a low of 35.21% in 1975-76 to a high of 42.13% in both 1971-72 and 1972-73. In 1978-79, 35.84% of all state and federal revenues and 41.83% of state revenues were spent on education.

Of course, not all these state and federal revenues spent on education were spent on elementary and secondary education. In the 1978-79 recommended budget, 68.34% was spent on elementary and secondary education while the remainder was spent on higher education, special schools and vocational-technical schools.

Education expenditures by function for the period 1974-79 are found in Table 25. During this period total expenditures increased by 42.44%. The percent of the total amount spent for instruction and for supporting services stayed about the same during this period: 46% to 47% for instruction and 50% to 51% for supporting services. The largest relative increase occurred in instruction for special programs, going from 3.4% of the total in 1974-75 to 10.09% of the total in 1978-79.

Expenditures per public school pupil for the 1970s are found in Table 26. The expenditure per registered student increased by 99.39% from 1970-71 ($709.16) to 1978-79 ($1,413.98). Similar increases of 102% per pupil in average daily membership and 104% per pupil in average daily attendance occurred during the 1970s. The expenditure per pupil in average daily membership was $1,491.89 in 1978-79, while it was $1,625.47 per pupil in average daily attendance.

Changes in bonded debts and loans for the years 1974-79 are found in Table 27. There was a net increase in bond and loan indebtedness for each of the five years except 1975-76. The increase in indebtedness for 1978-79 was $35,166,865.

II. Comparing Louisiana and the Nation

A. Population Characteristics

By comparing Louisiana and national education statistics, the relative strengths and weaknesses of the state's educational system can be determined. Louisiana has a unique set of population characteristics, as can be seen in Tables 28, 29, and 30. Louisiana's birth rate has traditionally been among the highest in the nation. From 1960-75 the national birth rate dropped dramatically, and Louisiana's birth rate fell from the fifth highest to the ninth highest in the nation. Since 1975, however, the national rate has increased, and Louisiana's rate has increased at a faster pace than the national average (see Table 28). Provisional estimates[3] of the birth rates for 1978 and 1979 show a continued increase - 19.1 births per 1000 population in 1978 and 19.6 in 1979 - for Louisiana.

Louisiana ranks fifth in the nation in percent of the population who are school age (Table 29), while ranking forty-fifth in percent of the population aged 21-64. As a result of this demographic dispersion, Louisiana has 49.2 school-age children per 100 adults aged 21-64, the fifth highest ratio in the nation in 1977 (Table 30). This large number of school-age children per adult places a heavy education support burden on the adult population.

Traditionally, Louisiana has had a high rate of illiteracy. Based on Bureau of the Census estimates, Louisiana had a higher illiteracy rate than any other state in 1950, 1960, and 1970. In 1976, 8.7% of the Louisiana adult population were functionally illiterate or lacking a fifth grade education. Louisiana has ranked slightly better in median school years completed by adults, percent of adults who are high school graduates, and percent of the population who are college graduates, but the state still ranks in the lower quarter of the nation in these categories (see Table 30). The 1980 census will provide more accurate data on the current education attainment of adults in Louisiana.

B. Pupil Characteristics

Nationally, the absolute number of pupils in school peaked in 1970 and declined after that due to the lowered birthrate in the 1960s and early 1970s. Louisiana has followed this national trend: there has been a decrease in the absolute number of pupils in elementary and secondary schools (excluding kindergarten and special education) each year from 1969-70 through 1978-79.

A comparison of Louisiana and national declines in public school enrollment between fall 1971 and fall 1976 compiled by the Public Affairs Research Council[4] yielded the following results: (1) the Louisiana change in elementary school enrollment (grades 1-8) was -11.6% compared to the national decline of -11.2%; (2) the Louisiana percent change in high school enrollment (grades 9-12) was +7.9% compared to the national increase of +4.1%; and (3) the total change in fall public enrollments (grades 1-12 excluding kindergarten and special education) for Louisiana was -6.1% compared to the national average of -6.4%. Louisiana's slight relative loss in elementary enrollment was offset by a relative gain in high school enrollment.

The National Center for Education Statistics[5] presented similar results when comparing public school average daily attendance for the school years ending 1970 and 1977: Louisiana had an overall percent change of +0.8% during this period, while the national percent change was -2.6%. Thus, Louisiana's losses in public school enrollment and attendance during this period of national decline were equal to or slightly less than the national average. Projected future trends in Louisiana's elementary and high school education systems will be discussed in Section IV. (Different procedures were used by NCES and the Louisiana State Department of Education to calculate the average daily attendance figures presented here and in Table 3.)

Louisiana's recent enrollment figures are compared with national figures in Table 31. The state's public school enrollment was the eighteenth largest in the nation in 1978, and the state ranked fifth in percentage of students in nonpublic schools (behind only Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Wisconsin). The state ranks low, however, in average daily attendance as a percent of either enrollment (42nd) or average daily membership (42nd). The state had three of the nation's sixty largest public school systems in 1976-77 according to a recent report[6]: (a) Orleans parish ranked #25 with 91,298 students; (b) East Baton Rouge parish ranked #41 with 69,144; and (c) Jefferson parish ranked #42 with 68,851.

Louisiana also ranks high nationally in a number of special student categories. The state has the third highest percentage of public and private school students participating in federally subsidized school lunch programs. Also, Louisiana ranks seventh in the nation in percent of school-age children who are handicapped. (see Table 31).

Table 32 presents a comparison of Louisiana and national pupil retention rates from the fifth grade through high school graduation. Over the five selected years, Louisiana retained only 63% of its students in public and nonpublic schools as compared to a national retention rate of 74.6%. A separate retention rate was calculated for public schools only from the ninth grade through graduation and yielded similar data for Louisiana: a range of 63 to 67% of the fall 1966 through fall 1975 ninth grade public school only cohorts graduated four years later. This low retention rate explains why Louisiana ranked below the national average in percent increase in number of public high school graduates from 1972-78 even though the state was ranked high in percent of the population who were school-age during that period.

A recent report by the Louisiana State Board of Regents compared the ACT (American College Test) scores and high school gradepoint averages of first-time college freshmen in Louisiana with national scores. As indicated in Table 33, Louisiana students' scores on the ACT fell 12% (18.7 to 16.5) from 1969-70 to 1978-79, while the national average fell only 5% (19.7 to 18.7). Although declining ACT scores have been accompanied nationwide by increased high school gradepoint averages, the Board of Regents found grade inflation in Louisiana to be below the national average for the period reviewed. High school averages in Louisiana for first-time freshmen went up 10% between 1969 and 1978, compared to a national increase of 16%. The mean high school average of Louisiana first-time freshmen who took the ACT in 1978 was 2.81 (on a four-point scale), compared to the national average of 2.99.

Comparative figures on the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) entrance test present a different trend. As indicated in Table 34, Louisiana students scored well above the national average on the SAT from school year 1973-74 to school year 1977-78. The mean composite score for Louisiana students during that period was 958.2 compared to the national score of 905.8

The contradiction in ACT and SAT national comparisons may be explained by differences in the student populations taking the two tests in Louisiana. Louisiana has one of the most liberal policies for admission to college in the nation, and the state requires that all freshmen take the ACT. Consequently more students with marginal chances of success in college take the test in Louisiana than do nationwide. On the other hand, only those students going to out-of-state universities and in-state private universities take the SAT, while all freshmen take the test in certain areas of the country.

C. Staff Characteristics

In 1978 the Public Affairs Research Council published a bulletin entitled Impact of Declining School Enrollments: Past, Present and Future. In this bulletin it was demonstrated that a decrease in students and an increase in teachers occurred in grades 1-12 (excluding kindergarten and special education) of the Louisiana public school system between school year 1969-70 and school year 1977-78. An extension of their analysis through 1978-79 demonstrates a 9.7% decrease in students and a 2.7% increase in teachers during this period. These trends have resulted in a decrease in the average number of pupils per teacher from 23.2 in 1969-70 to 20.4 in 1978-79. Note that these figures are slightly different from those presented in Table 12, which included kindergarten and special education classes.

This trend in Louisiana followed a national tendency toward decreased pupil-teacher ratios in the 1970s. The national Education Association provides data which compare the trend for both the U.S. and Louisiana - this data can be found in Table 35. Louisiana ranked 37th in the nation in 1969 in teacher-pupil ratio and 32nd in the nation in 1977; the national ratio was consistently lower than Louisiana's except for 1972-74. (Some differences exist in the figures produced by the NEA and PAR analyses due to different techniques for computation of the ratios.)

NCES estimated[7] that 41.2% of the staff employed by the public school system in Louisiana were nonprofessional, compared to the national percent of 34.2% in the fall 1979. On the other hand, only 53.3% of the staff in Louisiana were professionals involved in education (instructors, etc.), compared to 59.8% nationally. Louisiana ranks first among the states in percent of nonprofessionals employed and last in percent of professional instructors.

While the state has maintained a pupil-teacher ratio comparable to the national ratio, the estimated average salary of public school teachers has been consistently below the national average. According to National Education Association estimates,[8] Louisiana paid its public school teachers 81.4% of the national average in 1969-70, 82.1% of that average in 1974-75 and 86.5% of the national average in 1978-79. The estimated average salary of public school teachers nationally was $15,040 in 1978-79, compared to the Louisiana average of $13,015. Although the state has not reached the national average in estimated public school teacher salary, it has made relative gains in rank among the states from forty-first in 1969-70 to thirty-eighth in 1974-75 to thirty-third in 1978-79. Also, Louisiana pays its teachers more than the following Southern states: Texas, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Mississippi and Arkansas.

The state ranks low in percent of teachers in public elementary and secondary schools who are male. In 1978-79, NEA estimated that 25.5% of the teachers in Louisiana were male, compared to the national average of 33.6%.

Louisiana has a relatively small number of basic administrative units operating public school districts: sixty-six, one in each parish plus the cities of Monroe and Bogalusa. This is the eleventh smallest number of operating units in the nation. See Table 36 for a summary of Louisiana staff characteristics compared to national figures.

D. Financial Characteristics

1. Financial Resources for Education

In terms of personal income, Louisiana ranks low in income statistics and high in poverty indicators. As indicated in Table 37, Louisianians earned only 84.2% of the national average for per capita income in 1977. Also in 1977 Louisiana ranked forty-eighth in personal income per child of school age, averaging $7,500 less per child than the national norm. This low average is a result of the high number of school age children relative to the adult population and the low per capita income in the state. In 1977, 32.7% of the households in Louisiana had an effective buying income under $8,000, well above the national average of 25.4%.

While Louisiana's per capita personal income is well below the national average, the state is only slightly below the average in per capita total general revenue of state and local governments. Given Louisiana's low per capita income, state taxes are relatively high. As indicated in Table 37, the state ranked seventeenth in 1977 in revenue of state and local governments as percent of personal income. It is interesting to note that these relatively high state taxes are not a function of property taxes, since Louisiana has the second lowest per capita property tax revenue in the nation.

The National Education Association estimated that Louisiana ranked fortieth in the nation in public school revenue receipts per pupil in average daily attendance in 1978-79. Compared to national figures, Louisiana receives relatively less of its revenue for public education from local sources and relatively more from state and federal sources. The NEA estimated that Louisiana ranked third in the nation in percent of public education revenue from federal sources in 1978-79. The National Center for Education statistics estimated that the state ranked eighth in this category in 1977-78 (see Table 38).

In a supplement to its basic volume, Tax Wealth in Fifty States, 1977, the National Institute of Education[9] presented tax capacity, effort, and collected revenue data for state and local governments. This supplement concluded that Louisiana under-utilized property taxes and slightly over-utilized sales and gross receipt taxes. While the state ranks relatively high in revenue of state and local governments as percent of personal income according to the NEA rankings, the NIE report concludes that the state is taxing well below its capacity relative to other states. In fact, Louisiana has one of the largest negative values in the nation for amount collected less potential tax yield. The major taxes being under-utilized are property taxes on commercial and industrial firms, public utilities, and residencies.

2. Expenditures for Education

Table 39 presents a comparison of Louisiana and national direct expenditures for all government functions and for education from 1970-77. For each of these eight years, the percent of per capita income that Louisiana spent on all government functions was above the national average, ranging from an excess of 1.1% to 3.2%. The percent of per capita income that Louisiana spent on education was above the national average from fiscal year 1969-71 to fiscal year 1973-74, fell slightly below the national average in fiscal year 1974-75 and was equal to the national average in fiscal years 1975-76 and 1976-77.

In 1977, Louisiana's per capita personal income was 84% of the national per capita income. In school year 1976-77 the amount Louisiana spent per capita on education was also exactly 84% of the national amount spent. Thus, Louisiana's low ranking in amount spent per capita on education (ranging from #38 to #46 in the years reviewed) is a function of its low per capita income (ranging from #41 to #46 during that period), rather than a lower percentage commitment of personal income to education.

It should be noted, however, that the state's tendency to commit a higher percentage of its per capita income to all government functions than the national average was not followed in percentage commitment to education during the 1974-77 fiscal years. For the year 1976-77, Louisiana used 33.2% of all government expenditures for education compared to the national average of 37.7%. The state ranked forty-fifth in the nation in that category that year.

Comparisons of state and national expenditures per pupil in average daily attendance and membership are found in Table 40. Louisiana spent approximately 85% to 90% of the national average expenditure for public schools per pupil in average daily attendance or membership for fiscal years 1977-78 and 1978-79. Although this expenditure is below the national average, the state did spend a larger percentage (5.0%) of its citizens' personal income on education in 1977 than the national average (4.6%). Thus, again, the state's low rank on school expenditure is a function of low personal income, rather than low commitment to education.

The National Center for Education Statistics[10] publishes an interesting comparison of the school systems of twenty large cities in the U.S. annually. In fiscal year 1977-78, the New Orleans public school system spent $1,647 per pupil in average daily attendance, compared to the national average for large cities of $2,195. Out of the nineteen cities ranked on this dimension, New Orleans placed fourteenth. The city spent more money per pupil in average daily attendance than did Houston, Indianapolis, Memphis, Phoenix and San Antonio.

Another publication by NCES presents the distribution of school districts by current expenditure per pupil. No school district in Louisiana spent more than $1,600 per pupil in the school year ending 1977; nationally, 22.9% of the school districts spent more than $1,600 per pupil in this school year (see Table 41).

A comparison of the purposes for which Louisiana and the nation expended education funds in 1976-77 is found in Table 42. Louisiana spent less than the national percent for instruction, plant operation and maintenance, and fixed charges in this year. It spent more than the national percent for administration, transportation services and other pupil services, including food services.

III. Perspectives on Louisiana Education in the 1970s

A number of interesting developments occurred in education in Louisiana during the 1970s. The educational attainment of the state's citizens at the beginning of the decade was low: 13.1% of the adult population had less than five years of schooling, while only 42.3% of the adult population had completed high school and 9.1% had completed college.[11] By 1976 the U.S. Bureau of the Census indicated that only 8.7% of the adult population lacked a fifth grade eduction, while 58.3% had completed high school and 11.5% had completed college (see Table 30). Since this trend toward higher educational attainment by the state's adult population can be reasonably assumed to have continued through 1980, the decade of the 1970s was characterized by a marked increase in the absolute educational attainment level of the state's citizens.

However, the state's rank in educational attainment relative to other states[12] failed to improve from 1970-76. Louisiana had the highest percentage in the nation of its adult population with less than five years of education in both 1970 and 1976. In 1970 the state ranked forty-second in percent of its adult population with a high school education; the state dropped to forty-third in 1976. Similarly the state dropped from thirty-sixth to forty-first in percent of the adult population with a college education from 1970 to 1976.

Thus, educational attainment in Louisiana during the 1970s was characterized by an improvement in the absolute number of years completed accompanied by a maintenance of rank relative to other states. Why didn't the state improve from 1970 to 1976 relative to other states? Two factors may have contributed to this failure to improve: (1) a very large percentage of the population had less than five years of education in 1940 (48.4%), 1950 (37.8%) and 1960 (27.9%) and many of these adults are still in the population in 1980; (2) since the state has an almost negligible migration rate (+0.5% from 1970 to 1977), there is little chance for an in-state migration of higher educated citizens or an out-state-migration of lower educated ones.

As noted in Section I, another development in education in Louisiana in the 1970s was the decrease in student enrollment. This decrease was produced solely by a decline in elementary enrollment, while secondary enrollment stayed at the same level during the 1970s. This decrease in student enrollment was accompanied by a decrease in student-teacher ratios in both the public and nonpublic schools.

While the pupil-teacher ratio decreased steadily throughout the 1970s in the state, Louisiana's national rank changed very little over this period. As noted in Table 35, Louisiana had the thirty-seventh lowest ratio in 1969, compared to the thirty-second lowest in 1977. A PAR analysis[13] on declining enrollments published in 1978 concluded that, "Less can mean more--more competent and enthusiastic teachers, more learning in the classroom and more efficient use of funds and facilities--but only if there is proper planning, sound policies and a commitment to make these objectives a reality."

Recent analyses by Glass and Smith[14] of the studies examining the relationship between class size, student achievement, teacher morale and pupils' attitudes affirm the benefits of smaller classes. The following relationships were discovered by these authors: (1) as class size increases, achievement decreases; (2) in smaller classes, pupils have more interest in learning; and (3) in smaller classes, the morale of the teachers is better. Thus, the trend toward a smaller student-teacher ratio in the 1970s may be regarded as a positive direction for Louisiana elementary and secondary education.

The decade of the 1970s was characterized by a large increase in the student population of special education. As noted in Table 12 there was an increase of 119.5% (from 12,749 in 1970-71 to 27,991 in 1978-79) in the population in special education classes in public schools. This increase only tells part of the story, however, since that population includes only those students in self-contained classrooms. According to figures gathered for the minimum foundation program's equalization distribution,[15] there were 82,657 students enrolled in all types of special education classes at the end of the first reporting period in 1978-79. In addition to those students in self-contained classrooms, this figure includes 27,635 students enrolled only in speech therapy and 28,184 enrolled in resource and itinerant special education classrooms. The total number of students in special education in 1977-78 was 82,003, according to the same source. See Table 43 for a breakdown of the special education students by type of class in 1978-79.

Total expenditures for special education in Louisiana increased exponentially during the 1970s, as can be seen in Table 44. State funds increased by more than 400% from 1972-73 to 1978-79, while federal funds in 1978-79 were twenty-nine times more than in 1972-73. The overall increase in expenditures for special education during this period was 517%.

The passing of Public Law 94-142 (Education for All Handicapped Children Act) by Congress in 1975 was, to a large degree, the impetus behind the expansion of special education in the state. The law calls for individualized schooling for all physically, mentally and emotionally handicapped students. Act 754, which encompasses Louisiana's state regulations in compliance with P. L. 94-142, was implemented in the local school systems in September 1978.

One immediate effect of this emphasis on special education was a dramatic increase in the number of evaluations carried out each year. According to a report on special education by PAR published in 1973[16], there were 8,863 evaluations of children for special education purposes in school year 1972-73. It is estimated[17] that 27,300 evaluations occurred in 1976-77, followed by 30,700 in 1977-78 and approximately 40,000 in 1978-79.

The number of children in the gifted and talented category increased from 698 in 1975-76 to 5,736 in 1978-79 according to estimates from the Division of Special Educational Services. Other significant developments in special education in the 1970s included: (1) the establishment of statewide standards for the evaluation of each child (contained in the Pupil Appraisal Handbook, Bulletin Number 1508) in October 1978; and (2) the introduction of a nondiscriminatory intellectual achievement testing program [the System of Multicultural Pluralistic Assessment (SOMPA)] for placement in special education.

Slightly over $100 million were invested in the expansion of Louisiana's vocational-technical system to fifty-one schools during the 1970s. Enrollment and expenditures for vocational education programs from 1971-72 through 1978-79 are found in Table 45. The majority of the secondary students counted in Table 45 are in city/parish school systems; for example, in 1978-79 only 1,642 secondary students[18] were enrolled in vocational-technical schools while the remainder were in vocational programs in the city/parish schools.

Vocational Education Amendments of 1976 (Public Law 94-482) mandated new vocational activities including a displaced homemakers' program, the establishment of a sex equity coordinator position and special vocational education programs for handicapped persons. The displaced homemakers' program now has seven centers and enrolled approximately 1000 students at the three centers which were operational in 1979.[19] Vocational programs for students with limited English speaking skills were also initiated in Louisiana during the decade.

Adult education continued to play an important role in Louisiana education during the 1970s. The state spent $2,930,506.21 for adult education in 1974-75; this amount had increased to $3,737,497 in 1978-79. 8,509 students received the general equivalency degree in 1978, while 10,838 did in 1979.[20] See Table 46 for a summary of enrollment, achievement and termination information for students in adult education from 1974-79.

Desegregation continued to be an important issue throughout the 1970s. Only four school districts (Allen, Assumption, Cameron and Vernon Parishes) had voluntary desegregation plans in effect; the remaining districts were under court orders of one type or another for desegregation. "Freedom of choice plans" were implemented in the school districts to convert the existing dual systems to unitary systems in which racial segregation would be eliminated. Federal district courts had the obligation to assess the effectiveness of the proposed plans to achieve desegregation in the schools. An important court decision in the latter part of the decade (Brumfield versus Dodd) made it unconstitutional for the state to give assistance[21] to any racially discriminatory or segregated nonpublic school.

Racial violence associated with desegregation was still a problem, particularly in the earlier years of the decade. The violence was enough of a problem to be voted one of the top educational stories in the state in 1972 and 1975 by the Louisiana Teacher Association's publication Louisiana Schools. Violence occurred in several parishes including Avoyelles, Lafourche, St. Charles, St. James, St. John the Baptist, St. Landry, St. Martin and Washington.

The development of teacher unions and the first teacher strikes in Louisiana occurred in the latter years of the decade. The Louisiana Federation of Teachers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers, has approximately 13,000 members in Louisiana in 23 city/parish school districts.[23] The Louisiana Association of Educators, which is associated with the National Education Association, has 28,200 members in all sixty-six city/parish school districts.[24] Three teacher strikes occurred in Louisiana in the late 1970s: one in Orleans Parish by the United Teachers of New Orleans in the fall 1978; one in Jefferson Parish by the Jefferson Teachers Association in the fall 1979; and one in East Baton Rouge Parish by the East Baton Rouge Parish Association of Educators in the spring 1979.

Accountability and assessment legislation was enacted in the second half of the decade and had an immediate impact on state education. In 1976 the Louisiana Legislature passed Act 709, which mandated a statewide public school accountability and assessment program. During the 1976-77 school year, twenty-six school districts began educational accountability programs. Act 621 of the 1977 Legislature superseded Act 709 and called for the development and implementation of a statewide program that was to be the responsibility of both professional school personnel at the local and state levels and the public.

Two major components of accountability, pupil assessment and personnel evaluation, were initiated during the 1970s. Reading and mathematics proficiency tests were field tested in the third, seventh and tenth grades in certain schools during school year 1976-77. The information derived from this field test was used in the development of a criterion-referenced assessment test administered statewide during the 1977-78, 1978-79 and 1979-80 school years. Only reading was assessed the first year, arithmetic was added the second year and writing was added the third. A program of nonpublic school testing using a variety of norm-referenced tests was begun in school year 1978-79.

Personnel evaluation was also an essential component of Act 621. Personnel accountability is defined as the evaluation of the activities of professional personnel in the performance of their respective tasks. The State Department of Education developed a set of guidelines for personnel evaluation, and each of the sixty-six school systems consequently developed its own unique program for personnel evaluation. The statewide program was initiated in school year 1978-79 with the evaluation of principals and teachers. In 1979-80 the evaluation was extended to include all certified and other professional school personnel, including those in the State Department of Education. The Bureau of Accountability annually gathers summative evaluation data from each school system and reports it to the Joint Legislative Committee on Education.[25]

IV. Forecasting Louisiana Education in the 1980s

Several of the factors which influenced education in the 1970s will continue to do so in the 1980s. Total student enrollment in elementary and secondary schools (excluding kindergarten and special education) will continue to decline through school year 1982-83, and then small annual increases will be made, according to estimates from the Louisiana Board of Regents. It is predicted that enrollment in secondary grades will decrease by 9.7% from 1978-79 to 1984-85, while elementary enrollment will decrease 2.5% in the same period. The overall decrease in school enrollment during this period is predicted to be 4.8%, but that overall decrease from 1978-79 to 1984-85 includes a modest 0.5% increase from 1982-83 to 1984-85. See Table 47 for enrollment projections by grade level through 1984-85.

While enrollment in regular classrooms should bottom out early in the decade and demonstrate modest gains throughout the remainder of the 1980s, enrollment in special education should continue to increase dramatically. According to P.L. 94-142 each child in special education must be provided an individualized schooling plan, written in cooperation with school officials, teachers, parents and where appropriate, the student. Also, the law's requirement that school facilities must be accessible and usable by handicapped students will necessitate renovation of some schools.

Desegregation and collective bargaining by teachers will continue to be issues of importance in the 1980s. According to a recent civil rights survey issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare,[26] Louisiana had the second largest number of districts (behind only Alabama) on the department's list of the 100 most-segregated districts in the nation. Officials[27] of Louisiana's school districts disputed this report, but the dispute indicates that desegregation issues will continue to influence education in the state during the 1980s.

Collective bargaining for teachers may continue to be an important issue in the 1980s. The state has no collective bargaining statute at this time for public employees, although two such bills were drafted for the 1980 session of the legislature. Ben Brodinsky recently[28] listed teacher strikes and bargaining as one of the top national education stories of the 1970s; it remains to be seen what impact this factor will have in Louisiana during the 1980s.

Accountability and assessment will be even more important in the 1980s than they were in the 1970s. Act 750 of the 1979 Louisiana Legislature enacted a competency-based education program which will coordinate all student assessment and school personnel evaluation activities. A major provision of the act was the establishment of "pupil progression plans" which each school district must develop. These pupil progression plans must outline the criteria for promotion or retention of students. An integral part of the pupil progression plans will be student performance on the Louisiana literacy assessment program, which will measure performance in the application of academic skills to life coping situations. The Louisiana Department of Education will field test the literacy assessment program in school year 1980-81. Each year thereafter one grade, starting with the second grade, will be incorporated into the testing.

While personnel evaluation will continue to be primarily the responsibility of the school districts, it is anticipated that state monitoring of the process will accelerate during the 1980s. Act 16 of the 1977 Special Legislative Session made passing the National Teachers Examination a requirement for initial state teaching certification. Initial testing on the NTE indicates that graduates from some universities score much better than those from others on the tests. An act passed by the 1980 Louisiana Legislature called for the creation of the Louisiana Teaching Professions Practices Commission, which will establish and implement a code of ethics for school personnel with the approval of the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. All of the activities mentioned in this paragraph are intended to improve the quality of school personnel in the state and will have a large impact on state education in the 1980s.

Another act passed by the 1980 Louisiana Legislature involves compensatory education. Act 750 of the 1979 State Legislature called for compensatory programs for students who fail to meet the minimum mastery levels as established by the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. Act 433 of the 1980 State Legislature funds pilot compensatory programs for the 1980-81 school year. A sizeable number of students could be enrolled in compensatory education classrooms by the mid-1980s.

Two recent publications,[29] Louisiana: Priorities for the Future (sponsored by Governor Edwards, the Louisiana Legislature and the Council for a Better Louisiana) and Focus on the '80s - 20/20 Solutions (published by the Public Affairs Research Council), listed recommendations to improve education in Louisiana during the next decade. The priorities for education recommended in Louisiana: Priorities for the Future are as follows:

1. Establish minimum proficiency requirements for students at all levels of education.
2. Review and upgrade certification standards for teachers, supervisors and administrative personnel with special emphasis on requiring proficiency in English and other basic skills.
3. Support classroom teachers with programs and policies to raise their effectiveness.
4. Establish a clearly defined, ongoing evaluation system for teachers, supervisors and administrators at the elementary, secondary and college levels - particularly for granting tenure.
5. Develop effective and appropriate approaches to deal with discipline problems.

6. Provide students with the best start possible in their academic careers.
7. Establish comprehensive guidance programs at all grade levels.
8. Develop and expand all programs for gifted and talented students.
9. Provide adequate funding of public education at all levels on a continuing basis to make quality education a reality.
10. Make a firm commitment to develop community support for public education.
11. Reorganize the structure and functioning of higher education.

Several of these priorities (1, 2, and 4) relate to teacher evaluation and student assessment. Highly recommended actions to accomplish priority three include providing adequate time for preparation and planning during school hours, extending employment to include a minimum of 10 extra days for teachers to use for planning and in-service training and increasing teacher pay with built-in cost of living raises.

One recommended action to deal with discipline problems was to adopt a five-year "reduction in classroom size" schedule. In order to provide students with the best start possible in their academic careers, one recommendation was to initiate a mandatory kindergarten program statewide for all children aged five. One recommendation to make quality education a reality (priority nine) was to re-establish the dedication of the Severance Tax and other specific funds to education through a constitutional amendment.

In addition to these general education priorities, the report suggested five priorities in reworking the curriculum of public schools. These priorities are: (1) emphasize the basic skills: reading, speaking, writing, listening and mathematical computation; (2) encourage innovative new curricula designed to provide Louisiana's students with the basic skills and knowledge necessary to function successfully in today's complex society; (3) establish an intensive college preparatory curriculum; (4) pursue active programs for continuing and adult education; and (5) improve and expand the state's vocational/technical education programs.

The Public Affairs Research Council publication made the following recommendations for education changes in the 1980s:

1. Revamp the state school aid formula.
2. Improve teacher competency.
3. Abolish tenure for school administrators.
4. Change terms of local school boards.
5. Improve administration of vo-tech schools.
6. Appoint the state superintendent of the Department of Education.

While the appropriateness of the specific recommendations and priorities made in these publications may be debated, the broad range of these recommendations indicates that the 1980s will be a decade of change and growth for education in Louisiana.

[a] Instructional personnel for the public schools includes librarians, guidance counselors, speech therapists, coaches and federal program personnel. Public school personnel does not include principals.

[b] Instructional personnel for the nonpublic schools includes full-time and part-time teachers, principals and librarians. Principals were included because it was not possible to disaggregate them from classroom teachers given the available data.

[c] Data was not available for the number of nonpublic special elementary and secondary teachers for 1970-71, 1971-72, and 1972-73. Therefore, students in special education during this period were assigned to regular elementary or secondary education classifications and were then used in calculating the ratios for regular nonpublic elementary and secondary education for those years. In 1970-71, 1,359 special education students were assigned to the elementary classification and 59 were assigned to the secondary classification. In 1971-72, 970 were assigned to elementary and 79 to secondary; in 1972-73, 1,566 were assigned to elementary and 98 to secondary.

[d] The percent change calculated is from school year 1973-74 to school year 1978-79, since data was not available on special education students from 1970-72 and their data was combined with regular classes for those years.

[e] Includes two students who were postgraduates.

The figures reported in the text provide a breakdown by self-contained and resource/itinerant classes, and this breakdown was not available for the categories in this table.

 These total figures include students in both self-contained and resource/itinerant classrooms. The figures in categories 1-19 do not add up to the grand total in category 22 because students may be enrolled in more than one classroom.

* These totals do not include students in kindergarten or special education. The total figures for the projections for grades 2-12 do not equal the combined projections for public and nonpublic schools. The reason for this is that each phase of the model-public, nonpublic, total-uses numbers relative to that phase only. The projections for 1979-85 were made by Mr. Larry Goux of the Louisiana Board of Regents. His projections exclude kindergarten and special education students.

General Explanation

This is the first year of the annual report in which data gathered for each of the parish/city districts are in one place. Previously, data on each parish/city district had been spread throughout the report in several summary tables. The Bureau of Research hopes that this revamping of the format will aid readers who are interested in detailed information on a particular school district.

Please note the following general points about the profiles:
(1) In many of the tables, particularly those for the smaller districts, the value of the entry for a number of the items was zero. In certain subtotals, blanks appear rather than zeros in order to avoid redundancy. There are only two places in the profiles where a blank does not mean a zero: (a) in the projections for kindergarten and special education membership in items 2 and 3, the blanks indicate that the Board of Regents did not make projections for those categories; and (b) in the writing results for the state assessment tests (item 13), a blank indicates that the state did not administer a writing test that year.
(2) The Bureau of Research is grateful to Mr. Larry Goux of the Board of Regents' staff for supplying the projections for school membership for 1979-83.
(3) The entry NA in items 18, 19 and 20 means that information from nonpublic schools was not available for those categories.
(4) In item 20, the districts were ranked from the one with the largest value (1) to the one with the smallest value (66) on all categories except two: (a) the ratio of public pupils to teachers where the district with the smallest ratio was ranked first and the one with the largest ratio was ranked last, and (b) the ratio of nonpublic pupils to teachers where the district with the smallest ratio was ranked first and the one with the largest ratio was ranked last.
(5) Note that only 54 districts had nonpublic schools, so the range for rank on the ratio of nonpublic pupils to teachers was only from 1 to 54.
(6) For the cities of Monroe and Bogalusa, projection figures (items 2 and 3) and per capita income figures (item 20) were not available on the city level; refer to the parish profiles of Ouachita and Washington for parish figures including the cities.
